Poor quality people management costs employers £84 billion a year

UK businesses are missing out on £84bn a year because of poor quality people management.

An IIP study of 4,000 employees showed many experienced uncertainty and were unsure of what was being asked of them. Resulting in approximately 40 minutes of wasted time per day – the equivalent to an employee doing nothing for 21 days per year.

Task management alone can account for up to 40% of an employee's time and with only 2% of the population able to multi-task efficiently, effective methods of tasks and reminders are key to optimising productivity.

With 53% of workers also suggesting smart devices create distractions affecting productivity, the two-way radio is an obvious communication choice to minimise inefficiency.
